

Bonus Task – Open Source Contribution

This is a bonus task – separate from the previous tasks and entirely optional.

The open source community depends upon talented developers around the globe making contributions to the backlogs of particular projects as well as building improvements to advance their code bases. This is an opportunity to look further into either Perspective or another open source project of interest to you, and make a contribution.

We'd be very interested to hear about your contributions, so feel free to submit pull requests with improvements to a core app, tackle an open issue, or even help improve the documentation of a project. Link any pull requests in the submission area. Alternatively, simply tell us about any plans or ideas for future contributions.

An example of open source software is the JPMorgan Chase Perspective framework that you've just become familiar with. Here are some relevant links:
